The Family Letter. [From the Danbury News.] In nine cases out of ten the letter is written by the head of the family, and of those sent an equal proportion is addressed to his wife's folks. We dont't know why it is that a man so rarely writes to his own folks, but as it is not the province of this article to treat on that subject, we will pretend we don't care. The hour being selected for inditing the letter, the first thing is to find the paper. There is always a drawer in every well-regulated family for keeping such things. It is either in the table or stand. Here the writing-paper and odd screws and fiddie strings and broken locks and fish-lines and grocery receipts are kept. There may be other things, but if there are he will see them. The sheet of paper is finally found; the fly stains neatly scraped off, and the search commences for the ink and pen. The former is invariably found on the mantle next to the clock, and is immediately laid on the table convenient to the perspiring man, who sarcastically inquires if the letter is to be witten to day or next Sunday. This inspires the wife with new zeal in the search. She goes over the drawer again, because she knows he wouldn't see anything if it was right under his nose, but it is not there. Then she looks over the top of the bureau, and lifts everything on top of the front-room table, and says it seems so singular it can't be found, when she saw it only the day before, and thought about the letter. Then she goes into the pantry, and after exploring the lower shelf in vain, stands upon a chair, and carefully goes over the top shelf, where the medicine bottles and unused cans are stationed. After she has done this she starts upstairs, and pretty soon returns with the pen, and takes it to the sink to wash the grease from it; but does not succeed in quite effacing the delicate scent of bergamot. his leads him to observe that anybody who takes a pen-holder to lift hair-grease from a bottle is too pure and innocent for this world. Everything now in readiness; good-humor is restored, the wife takes a seat opposite, with her elbows on the table and her chin in her hands, and assumes an expression of countenance that is mysteriously calculated to both encourage and repress the writer; and he grasps the pen tightly between his fingers, and stares at the paper with an intensity that is enly, and then suddenly ceases as it reaches to maintain extortionary prices. the date itself. He puts the holder in his mouth, and immediately spits it out again, making up a face that is, no wise suggestive of bergamot, and pettishly asks her if she knows the day of the month. Of course she does. It is the 13th-or is it the-but no-it

It consists of eight saloon carriages and offices, nanceted by covered passages, and divided ato dining and drawing rooms, bed rooms and theheus. The dining-room has large oval winlows, which give uninterrupted views over the ountry through which the train passes; the drawing-room is an elegant apartment, prettily umished and the bed-rooms might be those of omfortable house. The beds, are seemingly, the ordinary kind, but are in reality, hammecks, which enable their occupants to sleep without sustaining any annoyance from the vitration of the train. Of course such an estab-Shinent would not be complete without servants, and to the train are attached domestics of all kinds, from butlers to engine drivers and fiers. To the train, however, is attached a ad sonvenir; it formerly belonged to Napoleon and was used by him for his Lyons jouris though it would be difficult to recognize as the same, so completely has it been rein-tructed and improved. PROTECTION FROM MOSQUITOES.—Apply Verbena water to the skin, and you may and sleep in the midst of thousands with unity. Mind, it will not drive them away, they will not bite as long as a faintest trace e perfume remains. Below you will find ept for a superior article; any druggist but it up and the expense is trifling: Ess. erbena (Limonis Trifolia), 1 drachm; Cospirits (not cologne water) 95 per cent., 1 mix and agitate for 24 hours, then add el water, 4 oz. and filter. Bathe the beck and hands well, and I am sure muses will not trouble you.
